

Create your own Salt in His Shoes Game of Resilience

Your activity this week is to design a board game for you to play with your family and friends. We want you to link the theme of your game to follow the story you have just heard about the journey of a young Michael Jordan. You have 3 game-boards to choose from.

Michael experienced setbacks and obstacles in the story, can you remember them? We'll start you off - he was told he was too short to play basketball. He also showed a growth mindset in that he believed in himself. You may want to listen to the story again and list the things that could move you back on your game-board (setbacks) and the things that could move you forward (the positives).

Once you've got these you need to think about which squares you are going to place your instructions e.g. you're too short move back 3 spaces / you showed patience take another turn.

TOP TIPS: Don't have way more disadvantages than positives, you want a winner. Make your instructions clear and HAVE FUN!
